According to law, the resident has the opportunity to verify the accuracy of that list and the resident should sign the list, indicating its accuracy. If the resident disputes an item of damages, that dispute must be made in writing on the list compiled by management and signed by the resident. If the resident does not contact management prior to vacating or chooses not to schedule a mutual inspection, the list of damages prepared by Management should be mailed to the resident's last-known mailing address.
